HIGH POINT WANTS HER TAXES

TO MAKE AN EFFORT TO SECURE EXCLUSIVE USE OF ITS ROAD TAX.

Will Ask Representatives to Interfere—The Happy Marriage of Mr. Lyon to Miss Tomlinson.

Correspondence of The Telegram.

High Point, Jan. 30.—The Business Men's Association held a called meeting in the Enterprise office Monday night. New officers were elected as follows: President, R. A. Wheeler; vice-presidents, Dr. J. J. Cox and Prof. S. L. Davis; Secretary, J. J. Farris; Treasurer, W. C. Jones; Executive Committee and Officers of the Association, W. H. Ragan and A. T. Tate. Important subjects came before the Association as summed up in the three following items of improvement: A new passenger depot and modern hotel and better roads. It was ordered that the secretary correspond with Guilford county's representatives at Raleigh and ascertain what could be done towards securing the road tax collected in High Point Township for the purpose of improving the roads in said township exclusively. The roads in this township need improving and the Association thinks it is due to the farmers especially, who use the roads most, that travel should be made more pleasant to them.

The High Point Clothing Company, one of the best establishments in this place, has changed ownership, Mrs. H. H. Cartland, of Greensboro, purchasing same from Messrs. E. D. and W. B. Steele. The new company will do business at the old stand with the same officers, viz: President, C. M. Crawford; Secretary and Treasurer, Levi H. Cartland.

There is considerable activity at the Kohinoor Copper Mining Company's plant located near here. Dr. Harrell, the general manager, is busy superintending the sinking of new shafting and other machinery preparatory to running on a larger scale. Copper is being found in large quantities, while gold is located through the ground.

Capt. Fisher, who now lives in Washington, has been a guest of this city several times lately. It is rumored that the captain contemplates investing some of his fortune in High Point dirt and that he will probably locate among us in the future.

Mr. L. Renfry, formerly of this place, but now of Georgia, is here on a visit to relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cox, of Laurens, S. C., are in town visiting the family of her father, Assistant-Postmaster Eshelman.

Mr. Clarkson, who left this part of the State 35 years ago to reside in the west, is visiting relatives and friends in the neighborhood for the first time since his departure.

Misses Lottie Tomlinson, Mabel Tomlinson and Lizzie Morehead, of Durham, are here to attend the Tomlinson-Lyon marriage.

Mr. John W. Wilborn, real estate agent, has disposed of the Flagler residence to Mr. Joel Blain.

The home of Mrs. Anna F. Tomlinson, of this place, was the scene of a notable event this morning at eleven o'clock, when her charming daughter, Miss Berta Tomlinson, became the wife of Mr. Arthur Lyon, one of Durham's promising business men. The ceremony took place in the parlor, which was prettily decorated for the occasion in house plants, ivy and evergreens. Light from a dozen candelabra produced a pretty effect upon the surrounding effects. Before the entry of the bridal party Miss Lizzie Taylor, of Durham, sang sweetly "Because I Love you."

The first to enter was the groom with his cousin, Mr. S. L. Lyon, of Durham, as his best man. They were followed by Miss Deborah Tomlinson, sister of the bride, who was maid of honor. The bride leaning on the arm of her brother, Prof. C. F. Tomlinson, Superintendent of the Winston graded schools, entered next. The solemn words that made the contracting parties one were pronounced by Rev. J. R. Jones, pastor Friends' church in Greensboro. While the ceremony was in progress Mrs. E. G. Albright, of Greensboro, who presided at the organ, played softly a popular selection. Mr. W. C. Jones, of this place, was master of ceremonies. The wedding was pronounced by those present to be the prettiest of home weddings. The bride looked pretty, very pretty, and wore a becoming going-away dress of gray. The occasion being a home affair there were only the relatives and a few friends present. Those from a distance were: Mrs. J. M. Manrey, Salisbury; Mrs. Ella F. Jones, Chicago; Mrs. J. Ed Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. George Lyon, Miss Lizzie Morehead, Miss Lizzie Taylor, Durham; Mrs. Ed Albright, Greensboro. The bride and groom left on the 12 o'clock train to spend part of their honeymoon North. The bride is a lovely woman, highly educated, cultured and has many personal charms. The groom is with the American Tobacco Company at Durham, holding a position of trust. His future prospects are bright. Mr. Lyon congratulates himself on winning such a rare jewel for a companion through life.

The Piedmont Laundry, which has been in operation here for several months, is closed down and the same is advertised to be sold at public auction at 11 o'clock, the 8th day of February. The cause of closing down is not known. While in operation it was said by the proprietors that their patronage was large and the contemplated disposal of the outfit is a surprise to many.

Mr. C. H. Bumpass, of Greensboro, has opened a harness shop in the Jarrell building, on South Main street.

Mr. J. P. Redding, of the Olma Furniture Company, has purchased the J. M. Walker residence, on Thomasville street.

Mrs. S. J. Klutz has returned from the sanitarium at Salisbury, where she went for surgical attention.

Mr. W. H. S. Westlake, a prominent business man and capitalist of Lehigh, Pa., has been here several day prospecting. He contemplates moving South.

DEATHS LAST YEAR.

No Month Showed More Than Ten of Whites—Negro Death Roll Double That of White.

This morning City Clerk John S. Michaux was looking over the death records of last year. On footling up the whole it was found that the number of deaths in the city among whites for the entire year was only 84. Among the negroes the number was nearly double, 127. Roughly speaking, there are twice as many whites in the city as there are negroes, yet the number of deaths among the latter is twice as large. This makes the ratio of white deaths to colored ones as one to four. This tells the story of the effects of the careless, exposed life the negroes lead. The death by months of 1900 were as follows.

Whites.....	Month.....	Colored.....
2.....	January.....	6
6.....	February.....	5
3.....	March.....	13

Secret Marriage in Durham.

A marriage which is creating considerable talk in Durham was celebrated quietly at the home of the bride on Broadway street at that place on last Monday evening, news of which has just reached Greensboro. The contracting parties were Mrs. Fay Rogers and Mr. John Lanel, of Wheeling, West Virginia. The bride and groom are aged 24 and 26 years respectively, and are well known in Durham. The groom left on Tuesday morning for his home in Wheeling, leaving his bride to follow in a few weeks. The affair was kept a secret until this morning. The parties are known here.

Southern Gains One Suit.

The Southern has gained one case in court. It happened yesterday, when the jury brought in a verdict of no damages for Miss Anna Fuqua, of Reidsville, who sued for $2,000. She was hurt while stepping off of a train in Salisbury.

TO IMPEACH JUDGES.

HOUSE RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

JUSTICES FURCHES AND DOUGLAS THE ONES CONDEMNED.

Craig Asks for an Investigation of the Course of These Two Judges Also of the Ex-Treasurer and Ex-Auditor Regarding the Case of Shell Fish Commission White

Special Dispatch to The Telegram.

Raleigh, Jan. 31.—At the convention of Confederate Veterans here today, at which delegates are present from all over the State, a committee reported a resolution, which was unanimously adopted, urging the Legislature to appropriate $20,000 to the maintenance of the soldiers' home, and $5,000 for new buildings and improvements.

The resolution further asks that a pension tax be made five cents on the $100 worth of property and fifteen cents on the poll; that all Confederates who have reached the age of seventy years and are unable to support themselves, be pensioned, and also all soldiers' widows who have reached the age of sixty-five years.

The convention thinks that there will be no further special pension legislation necessary. The convention also urges the Legislature to have published a correct roster of the North Carolina Confederates. Committees were appointed to present both matters to the Legislature.

In the Legislature.

A resolution was introduced in the House for a joint committee on labor and labor laws.

Bills were introduced requiring all executions to be private and requiring the commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment.

The Senate, by a vote of 24 to 21, passed the bill granting alimony in absolute divorces.

Craig, of Buncombe, in the House, introduced a resolution of inquiry into the action of Justices Furches and Douglas of the Supreme Court and the State Auditor and Treasurer in the payment of the claim of shellfish commissioner White, after being forbidden by the Legislature to pay.

The resolutions condemn them and call for the impeachment of the Judges named. A resolution was adopted ordering White to turn over the oyster patrol steamer Lily to the Governor and to hire a sail boat for his own use.

Disastrous Mine Explosion.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Pittston, Pa., Jan. 31.—A fearful explosion occurred this morning in Fernwood Mine. A fire followed, and it is feared that the entire force of workmen will be incinerated before aid can reach them. Two bodies have been taken out, but they were so mangled and burned they cannot be identified. Flames from the lamp of a miner came in contact with gas, and the explosion that followed shook the earth for a mile around. The roar was heard all over this city, and crowds at once rushed to the mouth of the mine. The miners are nearly all foreigners. The number in the mine is not exactly known.

Dewet Shoots Peace Commissioner.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Cape Town, Jan. 31.—The commission at Kronstadt reports that Andries Wessel, one of the peace envoys, was shot at Klipsfontein January 28th by order of General Dewet. The Boer attack on the Boksburg Mires resulted in a damage of two hundred thousand pounds.

Notice!

Members of the Hook and Ladder Company are requested to meet in the Firemen's Hall this evening at 7:30. Business of importance.

Big Fire in Plymouth.

Special Dispatch to The Telegram.

Plymouth, N. C., Jan. 31.—A great fire occurred here today. The post office and fifteen other buildings were burned.

A MURDEROUS BEATING.

A Negro Beats His Wife Almost to Death With a Rock.

Between eleven and twelve o'clock last night John Burton, a negro, went to Vanstory's livery stable, found his wife there, perhaps in the company of other men, and with a rock or other hard weapon, pummeled her nearly to death, beside slashing her head across two or three times with a razor. The woman yet lies in an unconscious state in jail where she was taken when the crime was discovered, and the brutal husband is also in jail.

Anthony, Kan., Jan. 30.—Mrs. Nation was outdone here today, when a band of W. C. T. U. women, headed by Mrs. Sheriff, of Danville, Kan., completely wrecked the fixtures of four "joints," smashing plate glass windows and mirrors right and left and turned gallons of liquor into the gutters. The women, who were of the best families in Anthony, were accompanied by their husbands and sons or brothers, who assured protection. No arrests were made and the band will, it is said, start out tomorrow on a tour of Harper county, which is prolific in saloons. Mrs. Sheriff, who led today's raid, is under bond to appear in Danville to answer a charge of saloon-wrecking placed against her six weeks ago. Mrs. Sheriff came to Anthony late yesterday and worked all night procuring hatchets, axes and other implements of destruction and it was 2 o'clock this morning before she had perfected plans for the raid. She enlisted the following women: Messrs. M. J. Davis, Wm. Scott, F. H. Brubaker, Louis Macy, T. G. Hooper, Chas. Robinson, John Hickens, John Kendall, J. H. Shelton, and the Misses McKay, Page, Massey, Robinson and Nixon, all of Anthony. They began their attack shortly after daybreak, taking the saloon-keepers and the town officials by surprise.

A drug store was the first point attacked, but, though demolishing costly bar fixtures and a register, they were unable to locate the stock of liquor. The next place, a half a block away, was thoroughly wrecked. The proprietor attempted to stop the work, but the husband bodyguard, with a blow of the head with a beer bottle, quickly rendered the irate proprietor hors de combat.

Two more "joints" were visited in quick succession. Their furniture was demolished and the stocks of liquor emptied. The women then knelt and prayed. They asked the Almighty God to guide them to other dens of iniquity and direct their footsteps to other rum-cursed towns in Kansas.

Immediately warning waste-telephoned to adjacent towns by local saloon sympathizers, who wished to warn their fellow-saloon-keepers. The mayor swore in extra police and the crusaders were placed under strict surveillance. He also preserved the names of the women engaged in today's work.

As a sequel to the raid a number of young men and two or three small boys became reeling drunk.

A Boston Woman Wrecks a Saloon and Laid Out the Barkeeper.

Boston, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Mary Green, who seemed to be familiar with the methods of Mrs. Carrie Nation, of Kansas, wrecked a Cambridge street barroom last evening, and today was sentenced to serve a term at the house of correction.

Mrs. Green not only laid the bartender low with a plate, but also reduced the bar ware to molecules, shattered several plate glass mirrors and drove the frightened patrons of the establishment into the wine cellar. "I'm Carrie Nation," she yelled, "and I'll leave no rum shop in the town when I get through."

Mrs. Nation Organizes a Force of Wreckers

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 30.—Mrs. Carrie Nation today organized a band of 46 women to follow her leadership and assist in wiping out "joints." The band was organized at a mass meeting for women called by Mrs. Nation and presided over by her at the Presbyterian church.

A Ministerial Association to Organize.

In response to a call of the Greensboro ministers to meet to organize a Ministerial Association a number of ministers met yesterday at West Market church and agreed to organize such association, provided a majority of the white ministers of Greensboro would join the association. Next Wednesday afternoon, February 6, at 3 o'clock, in West Market street church the white ministers of Greensboro are invited to meet to decide upon the organization.

FIGHTING INDIANS ON OLD GROUND.

It is an interesting coincidence that the first call upon General Fitzhugh Lee, since he assumed command of the department of the Missouri, should be for the suppression of an Indian uprising on the Indian Territory border, exactly the same strip of country where, about forty years ago, the general engaged in his first active battle as an officer in the United States army, says a Washington correspondent of The Richmond Times.

General Lee was shot by Indians and severely wounded during that engagement.

In 1858 General Lee was a second lieutenant of cavalry and under Major Van Dorn, who, in after years, became a general in the Confederate army, took part in the Comanche war in Northern Texas and the western part of the Indian Territory.

Fifty years ago campaigning in the territory was a different affair. Henrietta, now at a junction of two railroads, did not exist. The nearest outpost of civilization was Fort Sill and Fort Gibson, to the northeast. This territory, now in the department of the Missouri, was then in the department of Texas. Under Major Van Dorn the Cavalry started out to chastise the Comanches, who had been committing depredations in that territory. They marched over the present site of Henrietta, crossed the Red river, and pitched their tents on the south side of the Wichita mountains, west of Fort Sill. Here they met the Indians, and in the fight which followed killed over fifty of them.

In that engagement General Lee was wounded with an arrow, which passed between the ribs on his right side and penetrated his lungs. He was carried 200 miles on mule litter, and a gash nearly caused his death. The general entertains a lively remembrance of that trip over the plains.

A mule litter was one of the institutions of the old army, and was used as auxiliary to the ambulance. It possessed the merit of being easily made and was fairly effective. To make it, two poles were cut about sixteen feet long. Between the poles, placed three or four feet apart, slats were nailed as in a ladder, leaving four feet at each end of the poles bare. Auger holes were bored in the top of the poles and saplings were bent in the form of wagon bows, reaching from one pole to the other. Over this tent canvas was thrown to afford the wounded man shelter. On top of the slats was placed a mattress composed of blankets. At the end of the poles, where the slats were left off, straps were attached which were designed to be suspended across the back of a mule. The man was placed upon the litter with his feet forward and his head below the canvas, directly under the head of the rear mule.

When General Lee was being carried from the fight on one of these litters the horse-flies were bad, and one of them had persistently bothered the surgeon's horse. Finally it lighted on the rear litter-mule and the doctor struck it with his whip. The mule jumped backward, while the forward mule walked on. The result was that the head of the litter fell to the ground. This scared the forward mule and it ran away, dragging the litter several hundred yards across the prairie, until the troopers could capture it. Internal hemorrhage was induced by the fall, and when the surgeon got to General Lee he thought his chance for recovery slim. But he got well and as sound as a dollar.

It was right over this same ground that he made his last campaign on the soil of the United States, as an officer in the United States army.

Building Material Scarce.

Greensboro Patriot.

As a result of the activity of building operations in the city, there is a scarcity of building material, especially bricks, occasioning delay in the completion of a number of buildings. A contractor tells the Patriot that there will be renewed activity in all building operations when spring opens.

The real estate market in Greensboro has been quite active for some time, especially since the beginning of the new year. There is a strong demand for property and prices are good. Several important deals have been consummated quite recently, and the indications are that the present year will witness more building and improvements than for several years past.

The most soothing, healing and antiseptic application ever devised is DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It relieves at once and cures piles, sores, eczema and skin diseases. Beware of imitations. Howard Gardner.

ENGLAND AWAITING THE FUNERAL OF THE DEAD QUEEN.

London, Jan. 30.—All London is in mourning. Blinds are drawn, business is suspended, buildings are draped in black, and flags hang at half mast.

The sorrow felt throughout the empire is described in a constant succession of telegrams arriving from every important town in the colonies, all telling of the suspension of business, the closing of theatres, the display of mourning emblems, and arrangements for memorial services. All the Governors have sent, on behalf of their respective colonies, telegrams of condolence to King Edward and Mr. Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The Gazette orders the Court to go into mourning until July 24, and into half mourning until January 24, 1902. Lord Roberts has ordered the army to adopt mourning until March 5.

Memorial services will be held in St. Paul's Cathedral morning and evening daily until the burial. At the first of these, held after the regular evening service yesterday, some 5,000 persons were present. Bishop Barry read the burial service, and the "Dead March" in "Saul" and other funeral music was rendered.

There are exceptionally large congregations in the churches in all parts of the country. At St. Paul's the prayers for the royal family were altered to read: "For our Sovereign Lord the King and the Queen's Consort."

At Osborne House lie the mortal remains of the well beloved Queen who for sixty-three years wielded the sceptre over the greatest kingdom in the world. Her rule was gentle, her influence was always on the side of right and justice, her memory will be precious, and the name of Victoria will ever stand out on history's pages as one of the brightest in English annals.

The coffin rests upon a specially erected platform draped with royal purple, the feet lying to the east. All about are exquisite flowers. The head faces the simple altar. Over the features is a thin veil. The Queen is attired in black and her arms are folded. A beautiful gold cross lies on her breast.

Death has softened the Queen's face, and the thin veil conceals the terrible defects. The hand of the Mighty Lever has dealt with her lovingly.

The interment will take place in the royal mausoleum at Frogmore, Windsor, where Her Majesty desired to be laid to rest beside her much loved and lamented husband. Over the door is carved this inscription:

Farewell, beloved!

Here at last I will rest with thee.

With thee in Christ will I rise again. Among the many thousand messages of condolence that have been received by the Royal Family since the Queen's death, none, perhaps, has caused so much favorable comment, or give so general satisfaction as that from the honorable President of the United States. It was one of the first to arrive and its kindly tone and sympathetic expressions will not soon be forgotten.

The death of the Queen will entail a great many changes as regards royal residences. Buckingham Palace being the official London residence of the sovereign, it is expected that Marlborough House will go to the Duke of York. Osborne House and Balmoral formed a part of the private property of the Queen. The former, it is believed, has been left to Princess Henry of Battenberg, Governor of the Isle of Wight, and the latter to the Duke of York.

And now Great Britain has a King. Not one of all those who attended the ceremonies of the accession of Queen Victoria June 30, 1837, witnessed the accession of her eldest son on Wednesday last, but the procedure was virtually the same, and when the oaths had been administered to the King and taken by the Councillors, and when the Ministers had offered to resign their offices and had been re-appointed, the Great Seal was affixed to the proclamation, which was ordered to be read at St. James', Charing Cross and Temple Bar Griffin and the Royal Exchange. Parliament met in solemn state for the renewal of the oath of allegiance to the crown, and minute guns in honor of the dead sovereign were fired on the Horse Guards Parade. English history repeats itself in the functions of the accession of each new sovereign with mediaeval glamour, heraldry and the formalities of stately etiquette. The interval in this instance has been long between the reigns, but tradition is potent, and as Emerson said, the English god is precedent.

The language and tone of the first public utterance of King Edward VII. are favorably commented upon, and the general feeling is that he will follow in the footsteps of his beloved mother to make a model ruler despite the fact of former indiscretions. The great heart of the English people is generous and will loyally follow and support the king.

Not From Greensboro.

Winston Journal.

A young man and a party supposed to be his uncle from Mt. Airy called on Register of Deeds Lindsay last night. The former wanted licence to marry a girl by the name of Andrews, who he said lived in Greensboro, but that she would meet him in High Point today and they would come to Winston together and get the knot tied.

When Mr. Lindsay suggested that he would phone Greensboro and get this statement in regard to her age substantiated, he said no she is now in Charlotte.

As the young man could not furnish proof as to the young lady's age, he could not get the license.

Mr. Lindsay telephoned a Mr. Andrews in Greensboro the circumstances last night and while they were at the phone Mr. Andrews said "wait a minute," and when he returned he said that his daughter was in bed all right.

The young man said he would return here this evening with his girl, so it is supposed that she lives in Charlotte and that some other ruse will be resorted to.

THREE SYSTEMS OF GRADED SCHOOLS

The bill to establish a graded school system at Guilford College, which has just been passed by the Legislature, speaks unmistakably well for the village and community clustering about the excellent institution mentioned above. This is the first graded school ever established in North Carolina not embracing a strictly urban population. It is also worthy of note that this first marked extension of the improved school methods occurs in Guilford county where there are already two systems in operation, and in which county, also, was the first school of this kind established in the State. Guilford now leads with three graded school systems.

Concluding a long and well written editorial favoring compulsory education, the Charlotte News says:

Governor Aycock and the Democratic legislature are pledged, not simply to appropriate money for educational purposes, but to see that the children of the State are educated and we do not believe the desired end will be reached unless a compulsory educational law is passed. The citizen who will allow his so-called personal liberty to step in between his child and an education is not worthy the consideration of earnest, sincere men, who have the interest of the future of their State and its citizens, at heart.

The News' clear enunciation on this important subject, does it credit. This is a thing which must come. People some years ago did not believe in orphanages, but they do now. This legislature will perhaps not be acting wisest to attempt any compulsory law, but if it shall adopt some such plan as that suggested by the committee of the Teachers' Assembly, together with such quasi-compulsion as will likely be connected with a labor law, in two years more the State will be ready for the next onward step, which will be a general compulsory law.

Little Delaware certainly does what she wishes to do and makes no fuss about it. On Tuesday the senate of that State passed a bill to cause wife-beaters to be given twenty lashes at the whipping post, one to abolish the pillory, and an anti-trust bill, prohibiting the manufacture and sale of cigarettes, cigarette paper and cigarette tobacco in any part of the State of Delaware, even on railroad trains passing through. This bill, says a Philadelphia Record special, was operated against in vain by a strong Tobacco Trust lobby.

The two noted retired statesmen, Bryan and Morton, who are now running weekly newspapers in Nebraska cannot be said to be winning any great credit as journalists. The Commoner is a rehash of campaign rot and the Conservative is a lump of dullness. We hope that the desire among retired and unsuccessful statesmen to enter the newspaper field will not become epidemic. Much has been said of the name of the Commoner; a perusal of its contents would cause one to think that it should have been named "The Growler."

The greatest thing in favor of a senatorial primary is that it leaves the legislature free to transact business with no fear of the deadlock such as has just caused the Delaware body to adjourn till March. But so far this is the only point that has turned up in its favor. Perhaps this would not operate in States where there were not men like Addicks who wish to buy their way into the Senate.

FRILLS OF FASHION.

Some Mints About the Latest Coiffures and Up to Date Headwear.

The present fashion in coiffure seems to embrace every possible style of arranging the hair, and every sort of decoration which ingenuity can devise. The latest and most telling decoration that the mode has to offer is the large roses, one on each side of the knot as shown in the illustration. Each rose has a short stem and a few green leaves arranged to fall at the side and the whole effect is broad and rather low, like the hats this season. Smaller roses may be used, and only one if more becoming, but the really stunning thing is to have the two very large open roses, but such roses as they are! far more beautiful than anything we have ever had before in the way of artificial flowers, says the New York Sun.

Gold roses are the latest, but there are beautiful white, yellow and pink blooms that can put to shame anything nature ever produced. In a little store on Fifth avenue this variety in hair ornaments is shown in all its perfection, and the woman who can sport two of these gorgeous blossoms on the crown of her head with becoming effect may congratulate herself on her up to date appearance.

Various designs in gold effects are made for the hair, and tied prettily at one side with narrow black velvet ribbon. The tendency is toward more rather than less decoration, and for the flat, broad effects. The hair itself is of seemingly little importance in the evening coiffures except as it falls about the face, for the knot is almost hidden by the flowers. It is arranged high, low or medium, as may suit your head and the hat you wear, and you part the front at one side, wear it loosely so that there is only a suggestion of a parting in sight and arrange it to fall softly about the ears, puffing it out well from the face.

The high, evenly rounded pompadour has had its day, and much softer effects about the face are sought after. In other words, the hair must fall on the forehead in some becoming manner if you would be up to date. The style of the millinery suggests the outline for the hair and the new broad hats cannot be becoming if this point is not considered.

The Josphine knot high on the head is one well favored style, but unlike Josphine's coiffure the locks are waved deeply about the face and dressed in the approved modern fashion. One large rose directly in front of the knot with a few leaves falling at one side is effective, but this style of hairdressing is best suited to the empire gown. A new fancy for keeping the hair in place at the back is to wear two brooches one directly above the other, and much larger than the lower one.

No gloves and many rings seem to be the fashion among some women at the theater, but you will notice if they are swell that the sleeves are very long, extending well over the hand and quite transparent.

For dressy occasions and evening wear especially there is an endless variety of lace hats made over white chiffon and trimmed with a knot of colored velvet, plumes or feathers. Cream lace run with gold thread, and all gold lace are used for the crown and brim, and again the soft brim is of lace over chiffon and the crown of plain or embroidered velvet in some light color. Outline is the telling point in a fashionable hat quite as much if not more than the trimming. Upstanding, flaunting trimmings are not the mode and some of the smartest hats are very simple except in the price, which seems to creep up a little higher each year.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

Britain makes 300,000,000 yards of linen a year.

Railways use up over 2,000,000 tons of steel a year, almost half of the world's product.

Consul Schumann, of Mainz, notes that a German sample room has been opened at Constantinople.

According to Blanco's work on the flora of the Philippines, there are 28 genera of palms, with 87 species, on those islands.

A French scientist has found a name for the finger-biting habit. He calls it onychophagy, from the Greek, meaning nail eating.

The German consul general at Sydney reports to his home government that the Australian market has been largely taken possession of by American industry.

In some grottoes in Algeria French explorers have recently discovered stone implements mingled with the remains of extinct animals belonging to quaternary times.

A French scientific journal warns its readers against the time-honored custom of using spiders' webs to stop bleeding. It is claimed that webs are peculiarly liable to be infected with microbes, and among other afflictions that have been traced to the use of old dusty spiders' webs bound upon wounds is the dreaded tetanus or lock-jaw.

WOMEN RUNNING STORES.

The Letter Day System of Sending Bonnets "on Approval" Is Destructive.

The "returners" is the title applied to a large and growing number of women who deal with the department and other retail stores who do business on credit. So great has become the feminine army deserving the new appellation that store managers are considering the desirability of making up a "black list" for mutual protection, says the Chicago Chronicle.

"The women are having too much fun at our expense," said a State street man the other day. "We would give a big price for a remedy that would save us without hurting the feelings, or costing us the patronage of the madams and misses who seem to think we have invited them to dabble promiscuously in our stocks."

The custom objected to is that by which goods may be taken home "on approval." The scheme operated well at first, but soon women noticed that there was no bar to ordering in quantities far beyond needs or intention of buying. It is quite the thing nowadays for a matron of good financial standing who wishes, to have a new bonnet, to spend the day in "shopping" at down-town millinery emporiums. From each of a dozen she ordered a choice piece of headgear sent up "on approval," and when her husband comes home at night she dons them each in turn and tries to obtain his endorsement of the most expensive. Failing that, she works "down grade" until he throws up both hands. Or perhaps she has a similar "trying-on bee" with her female friends for critics.

In any event, 11 of the 12 bonnets are sent back the next day, without any cash to pay the storekeeper for the wear and tear incidental to the trip his pet confections have taken—"on approval." After a few excursions of this nature he is obliged to retire the bonnet from exhibition and charge its cost to profit and loss.

"If these 'returners' don't have more pity they'll send me to Kankakee," wailed a sufferer. "I'd go back to the 'cash down' system, but that would mean prompt loss of my trade to my rivals. Oh, for a Moses!"

WOOES WIFE ANEW.

Returned Klondike Finds Spouse Divorced for Supposed Desertion.

Three years ago Jerome W. Jordan, Climax, left Butte Creek, Mich., with a party of men bound for the Klondike. They went to Edmonton and Saskatchewan, Canada, by the Canadian Pacific and started for the land of gold by the overland route. After suffering untold miseries all the party returned home except Jordan, who succeeded in reaching the Klondike alive. He wrote to his wife, but she never received the letters. She supposed that he had deserted her and after waiting over two years sued for divorce, which was granted her on the ground of desertion, but she rejected all suitors.

Jordan delved a d'ug like a slave and finally struck it rich. Recently he suddenly put in an appearance at the old home, bronzed and toughened, bringing with him a snug fortune of $100,000.

Explanations followed. Jordan courted his former wife anew and the other day Jordan went to the county seat, obtained a marriage license and from his former husband and wife were again reunited in matrimonial state.

George J. Senor Bolet-Peraza immediately transferred the boat to Consul General E. Gonzalez, of Venezuela, who will have it transformed into a warship. It will carry four six-pounders and one 15-pounder.

Didn't Find Out.

As showing how inquisitive persons are righteously discomfited sometimes, at the very moment when information seems within their reach, we quote this dialogue from an unidentified source:

"What a beautiful lounge!"

"Yes. That's a birthday present from my husband. He always gives me a present that costs him as many dollars as I am years old."

"That's nice of him. It reconciles one to growing old." By the way, I have a lounge at home like that, but not nearly as fine, and we paid $38 for it."

"Is that all? This—this didn't cost nearly as much as that."—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

Ruling of a New York Judge Which Fixes the Time When Women Should Be at Home.

Justice Andrews in the supreme court of New York has handed down a decision in which he holds that a woman should be home by midnight. The question arose on an application by Florence Abel, a dressmaker, to join Jacob A. Ondrak, her landlord, from closing the front door of the house and not immediately admitting her when she rang the bell. Miss Abel says she leased two rooms from the defendant in which to carry on her dressmaking work and sleep at $5 a month. She was to be allowed to have her shop open from seven a. m. to ten p. m., but was to be admitted afterward at any reasonable time.

She complained that on November 10 and 13 she was locked out and on the second occasion could not obtain admittance and had to take a room at hotel. She said that she was kept in all day at her business and did not think it unreasonable that she should go afterward to a theater or elsewhere with her friends. Ondrak said it was necessary to keep the house locked at night, as the tenants, had a great amount of valuables there.

Justice Andrews granted a preliminary injunction requiring the defendant to permit her to enter her premises at all reasonable hours and promptly open the door for her up to 12 o'clock at night.

STREET PARADE AT NOON.

Anybody who imagines that there's nothing new in minstrelsy will be happily disappointed when they see the Barlow organization of forty members at the Academy of Music, Saturday Feb. 2. Playgoers can always depend upon getting their money's worth and all the fun that's coming to them when they attend its performance. Barlow's is as complete, original and up-to-date as it was ten years ago. This season it offers a variety of new specialties, jokes, songs, etc., in fashionable minstrelsy. Some of the "tur's" among the features of the performance involve a heavy weekly expense to the management of the company, but it pays to offer the best talent in the amusement world. As an extra attraction, the only Frank E. McNish, the original silence and fun man, has been engaged. A street parade will be given at noon.

An engagement that is attracting very much more than ordinary attention is that of the eminent actor, Creston Clarke, and the beautiful and talented actress, Miss Adelaide Prince. These popular players will be seen here in "The Last of His Race" and will doubtless be greeted by a very large and representative audience.

VEST POCKET COOK STOVES.

Compact and Convenient Contrivances for the Use of Uncle Sam's Soldiers.

The commissary general of the army has recently bought, for the special use of our soldiers, large numbers of little cookers of a kind newly invented. Each of them is hardly bigger than a teacup, so that the contrivance has the merit of being easily portable, while possessing the additional advantages of extreme simplicity and cheapness. With a single twist one unscrews from it a metal rim, and this, having three legs, is made to serve as a tripod-stand for holding a brass receptacle from which the cover is removed with another twist, says the Saturday Evening Post.

The receptacle, which is nothing but a small cylindrical cup, is partly filled with a whitish-looking substance that has the appearance of spermaceti. One is informed, however, that the stuff is in reality a mixture of wood alcohol and "some vegetable material," the nature of which is not explained. On being touched with a match it catches fire instantly and burns with a steady, lambent flame, which, though almost invisible to the eye, is extremely hot.

Now, the small quantity of alcohol mixture in the cup—it is quite solid—will burn for an hour and half, and the cost of it is almost nothing. It will serve to heat water, or for any purpose of minor cookery, a saucepan or light pot being placed upon the tripod. When the fuel-mixture is used up, a fresh supply is scooped out of a pint can with a spoon and put into the brass cup, so that culinary operations may proceed. In a region where fuel is scarce—as in China, for example, or in parts of the west—such a contrivance is invaluable. It is likely to be adopted by sportsmen for use in camp.

The navy has purchased a quantity of these impromptu cookers, and is furnishing them by way of experiment to some of the ships.

As a means of heating shaving-water, under conditions where the ordinary conveniences are not at hand, the contrivance described is specially available.

INVENTIONS OF THE PAST.

Countless Models of the Patent Office Show What Progress Has Been Made.

The experience of the patent office with its "hall of models" throws an interesting light upon the progress of American invention. For many years the government required an applicant for a patent to submit a model of his invention. If the invention were a machine, none of the three dimensions of the model was to exceed 12 inches. The models were displayed in show-cases on the upper floor. This extensive collection of little engines, pumps and mowing machines came to look somewhat like a toy shop, and to it hundreds of visitors were attracted, says Youth's Companion.

But so long ago as 1880 it became evident that the practice of receiving models must be discontinued. The space they occupied was needed by the office for its regular business. So the models then on hand were sorted over, and the most interesting ones were retained, appropriately grouped, as a patent office museum. They have since been frequently sent, as a part of the government's exhibit, to great fairs like that at Chicago in 1893.

The rest of the models are now kept on two floors of a large storehouse near the post office, which have been rented for that purpose. The few visitors who chance to stroll through that wilderness of showcases are reminded of the diverse channels in which American inventiveness has sought an outlet.

It is a singular fact that, to understand a machine, the patent office examiners prefer a mechanical drawing to an actual model, so trained have they become in translating the conventional marks of a diagram into the physical reality for which it stands.

THE GOLDEN CITY.

From the days of St. John's revelation
The marvelous story is told,
And down thro' the ages has come the song,
The song of the City of Gold.

To the innocent hearts of the children,
To the toilers who faint 'neath earth's sun,
To the old who have fought out its problems,
To the dying whose journey is done,

Comes the dream of the mystical city,
With colors and loveliness rife,
Iridescent its jeweled foundations,
Flower-bordered its River of Life;

And the streets of the city are golden,
And the seas of crystal appear,
And the sound of the harpers is in it,
And it knows not of sorrow or tears.

Like a mirage out in the desert,
Like the fabric that fashions our dreams,
Like some many-hued mirrored reflection
The heavenly Jerusalem seems.

We grope 'mid the types and the shadows,
We fret at its veiling disguise;
But our hearts cannot grasp or conceive
It—
Its glory is hid from our eyes.

We catch but a note of the music,
A glimpse swiftly passing and faint,
A hint of its wondrous perfection,
Low whispered to seer and to saint.

Yet the glow of it shortens the journey,
And our feet tread more bravely the road
Which leads to the sorrowless city
Whose Builder and Maker is God.

And thus as a gift to the ages
The marvelous story flows on,
And the heart of man rests on the vision
That illumined the eyes of St. John.

She Did Not Care

By Morice Gerard.

SIR ROBERT HARRINGHAM sat adding up accounts at the library table of his luxurious flat in Madox square. The handle of the door turned and John Freville entered, unannounced.

The two men were in sharp contrast—Harringham, cool, phlegmatic, cynical, with the blue eyes, fair hair and beard of the Saxon; Freville, dark, impetuous, full-blooded, generous, quixotic—a veritable Celt. Their friendship was the alliance of negotiations, secured by the cement of antithesis.

"How long is it? Eighteen months?"
"Two years to the day."

"So long!"
It seems to me an eternity, but the calendar is rigid. It neither measures sentiment nor registers feelings."

"I never quite knew why you went away. T. J. those Manilas, the brand is unexceptionable."

Freville took a cigar and lighted it mechanically.

"I expect you will the less understand why I have come back."

"Then I shall not try. If the cause is obscure the result is satisfactory, which cannot be said of the other inexplicable spring of your movements."

Had Harringham asked for a solution Freville would probably not have given it. Unasked, he proffered it. That is why truth is rarely disclosed in the witness box, evidence being a playful game of question and evasion.

"I heard three words—accidentally."

"And you went away for two years. That seems to lack symmetry. It ought to have been a year a word, or nothing."

Harringham was quizzing; but his friend was not listening. Freville was talking because he couldn't help himself. He had been silent too long to trouble himself as to the attitude of his listener.

"You know how I cared for Di Les- trange?"

"Most people did. You made no secret of it."

"She had always seemed specially kind—to care for me. I had never said anything; nor, of course, she to me. But there is a light in a woman's eye—sometimes!"

"I know; a dangerous light, like a will-of-the-wisp."

"So it was in my case. I found it out at the Leighan ball. Di and Alec Travers were in a recess together. Before I knew who it was, or, in fact, that any one was there—I had only just come up—I heard Di say: 'You need not think that I care for Freville.'"

"That was more than three words," interjected Harringham.

"I never slept that night. Next day I left England."

"For the Arctic regions, to cool your heated blood?"

Freville did not look exactly as if the remedy had been efficacious.

A runaway horse, attached to a smart brougham, in Regent street; people scattering in all directions, women fainting and shrieking, men chivalrously retreating into doorways.

A lithe figure steps off the curb and seizes the frightened brute by the bridle. They sway to and fro, while the brougham gyrates on its axis and threatens every moment to topple over. Two terrified women blanched with terror, look out breathlessly at the unequal struggle being waged on their behalf.

The man slips. He will fall. No, he won't! He is firm on his legs again.

He holds on like grim death and the horse is forced back. The modern dress does not lend itself to heroics; but there is a certain heroism, nevertheless, in the tense figure. A policeman runs up; then another. The horse yields to superior numbers.

Freville lets go the bridle as soon as his hand is no longer required. His face is flushed and an angry welt across his right wrist is the outward sign of a strained muscle.

A girl jumps from the brougham almost into his arms. It is Di Lestrange—or it was two years ago.

"We can never thank you enough, Mr. Freville—mother and I—you have saved our lives. I must go back to her. She is feeling faint. Won't you come and see us—to-night—at nine o'clock? Then we can hear of your return, and thank you."

Freville had hardly taken in what Miss Lestrange was saying. The excitement of the struggle, the surprise of the meeting, so sudden and unexpected, the old glamour reawakened—stronger than ever.

"Where?" Freville managed to stammer.

"In the old place, 19 Curzon street—where else should you think?"

Diana was recovering her composure. Freville gazed at the girl half incredulously.

"Still in Curzon street—you?"

"Why, where else?"

"I thought you were—"

"Well?"

"Married."

Di laughed.

"You say it as if you meant 'buried'—to whom, pray?"

"To Alec Travers."

"Alec Travers! The last man! Why, I never thought of him in my life. Now I must go. But we shall expect you at nine."

Mrs. Lestrange was too much upset by the adventure of the afternoon to appear at dinner or to receive their visitor afterward, much as she wished to do so. To Diana she intrusted the giving of her message of gratitude. Diana, in a simple evening gown of white, was sitting in the little boudoir when Freville was announced.

"Mother is too ill to come downstairs to-night. She will thank you herself another day; I cannot thank you enough. We owe our lives to you. I shudder now when I think of that awful race from Piccadilly Circus." Then the girl broke off.

"But tell me why you thought I was married; and to Alec Travers, of all people!"

Freville looked confused. He had only just dropped Diana's hand.

For a minute he did not reply. Diana Lestrange was not going to be put off. She recognized the fact that the reason of something she had felt more than anything which had ever happened to her was near the surface. She meant to know what it was.

Freville was looking at her. How he admired the fine curves of her throat, the delicate tracing of her eyebrows, the soft, inviting languor of her eyes, those magnificent coils of auburn hair. Possibly his eyes were eloquent of his impressions. His speech was lame and halting enough.

"I have been away two years."

"I know that."

"I went away after the Leighan ball—do you remember it?"

Di did not answer. She could not say enough without saying too much.

Freville went on: "I heard you say something that night—I did not mean to—until you spoke I did not know you were there; you were in a recess on the landing at the top of the stairs, behind some yellow drapery; I can see it all just now as vividly as I could then."

"Well?"

"You said: 'You need not think I care about Freville.' I thought, of course, Travers had been pressing you about me."

Diana looked puzzled. After awhile she said:

"So that was why you went away."

"That was why I went away," said Freville, simply.

Diana walked across the room to an escritoire and took out a bundle of papers. She had a curious habit of keeping the cards of her engagements, as a sort of informal social diary.

Just two years ago! Yes; there it was! Lady Gallaner: At home, four to six; and in the corner, Mr. Henry Nevile.

Diana handed the card to Freville without a word, just indicating the date with her forefinger. It was that on which he had started, the day after the ball.

"Music is a closed book to you," she said, quietly. "But in those days we music lovers were divided into two camps, Nevilleites and anti-Nevilleites. Neither I nor Alec Travers 'cared' for Henry Neville's playing. It was the only tie between us."

Diana looked into his eyes, and the smile about her lips deepened perceptibly as she added: "Neville is very like Freville, is it not, especially round the corner of some yellow drapery?" Gentlewoman.

"I tell you that idleness doesn't pay. The surest way for a person to get ahead is to keep moving."

"I fancy you're right. That's the way four of my tenants got ahead of me last week."—Stray Stories.

THE OLD NORTH STATE.

To the Editor of the Telegram:

The following poem, by Thomas J. Johnson, was given in response to a toast by one of California's most gifted sons, Sept. 5, 1870. It is dedicated to the memory of Z. B. Vance, "one of the people."

Carolina, the pride and the gem of the nation,

The home of blest freedom's first proud declaration,

The Star of her glory can never grow dark,

While her sons brave and gallant bear liberty's ark.

The time ne'er has been when the scorner's vile sneer,

From deeds grand and noble, her sons could deter.

With hearts warm and true, they'll ne'er bend the knee,

But to one—the fair Goddess of blest liberty.

Refrain:

Yes, Old North Carolina, with record so grand,

May her love for the right like a monument stand;

And her brave sons and daughters alike true as steel,

Cherish undying pride in this "land O'Leal."

Carolina, her fame grows in beauty and splendor,

To her first in freedom fresh homage we render,

The bright sparkling jewel, the first to give birth,

To the freedom of men in the best State on earth.

Her sons are as brave as the Romans of old,

They can ne'er be surbound with a tyrants bright gold,

For the banner of freedom they've sworn to defend,

And they'll live and die freemen, while for right they contend.

Her daughters are as fair as the snow on her mountains,

And pure as the rills as they gush from the fountains,

Each beautiful form with a bright smiling face,

Makes each a model of beauty and grace.

And her sons are as brave as her daughters are fair,

They've written their names on bright pages, where

Words of blest freedom her standard adorn,

May their deeds shape the course of nations unborn.

The following comments have been made:

This is, by far, the best tribute ever paid to the glorious Old North State.

CANAL IDEA IS AN OLD ONE.

Early Navigators Discussed Cutting Through the Isthmus of Panama.

The advantage of a canal or navigable channel through the isthmus of Panama is so obvious that it is not surprising to find the idea of such a waterway was seriously considered in the early days of Spanish conquest in the new world, says the Newcastle (England) Chronicle.

In the year 1527 the famous Cortes, being then in Mexico (or New Spain), sent three ships on a voyage to the Moluccas in charge of Alvaro De Saavedra. The expedition was an unfortunate one, as two of the ships were lost on the outward voyage, and Saavedra did not live to carry out his intention of returning by way of the city of Panama, on the Pacific side, and thence across the isthmus. His view was that at Panama he "might unlade the cloves and merchandise that he had, that so in cartes it might be carried across the planes four leagues, to the river Chagre, which they say is navigable, running out into the North sea not far from Nombre de Dios, where the ships ride which come out of Spaine."

In his "Discoveries of the World" published in 1555 and translated by Hakluyt and published in England in 1601, Antonio Galvano, governor of Ternate, in the Moluccas, says of Saavedra:

"If he had lived he meant to have opened the land of Castilia de Oro and New Spain from sea to sea, which might have been done in four places—namely, from the Gulf of St. Michael to Uraba, which is 25 leagues, or from Panama to Nombre de Dios, being 17 leagues distant; or through Zaqueator, a river of Nicaragua, which springeth out of a lake three or four leagues from the South sea, and falleth into the North sea; whereupon do saile great barks and crayers. The other place is from Tecoantepic, the river of Vera Cruz in the Bay of Honduras, which also might be opened in a straight, which, if it were done, then they might saile from the Canaries into the Malucos under the zodiak in a temperate climate, in lesse time and with much lesse danger, than to saile through the Cape of Boni Speranza or by the Strait of Magellan, or by the northwest."

Tale with a Moral.

There was once a woman who had never learned how to swim, although she went in bathing every day in the summer. She had a friend who had acquired this art with some trouble, and was very proud of her proficiency in it.

"It is absurd," said this friend, "to live near the water and not swim, although it is attractive to good swimmers if you can go out with them, and they do not feel that you are a drag on their pleasures. What would you do in case you fell off the pier? Now, watch me!"

With these words she dived off into the water and swam about by herself.

"It is a good thing to have a woman swim so well," said one of the men near by; "now, if any of the children fall into the water, she can rescue them."

Just then the woman who could not help herself uttered a scream and fell into the sea. Instantly five men leaped in to rescue her, and spent the rest of the day resuscitating her and inquiring how she was, leaving the swimmer to dive by herself.

This teaches us that nothing succeeds like distress.—Century.

A NIGHT OF TERROR.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she could not live till morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night. "All thought that she must soon die from pneumonia, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, saying that it had more than once saved her life, and had cured her of consumption. After three doses she slept easily all night, and its further use completely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all throat, chest and lung diseases. Only 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free at C. E. Holton's drug store.

When threatened by pneumonia or any other lung trouble, prompt relief is necessary, as it is dangerous to delay. We would suggest that One Minute Cough Cure be taken as soon as indications of having taken cold are noticed. It cures quickly and its early use prevents consumption. Howard Gardner.

A MONSTER DEVIL FISH

Destroying its victim, is a type of constipation. The power of this murderous malady is felt on organs and nerves and muscles and brain. There is no health till it is overcome. But Dr. King's New Life Pills are a safe and certain cure. Best in the world for stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Only 25 cents at C. E. Holton's drug store.

Fair tonight in east, probably occasional rains in west portion; warmer Sunday, increasing cloudiness and probably rain; northeast winds, becoming south, south to brisk on the coast.

Pepsin preparations often fail to relieve indigestion because they can digest only albuminous foods. There is one preparation that digests all classes of food, and that is Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It cures the worst cases of indigestion and gives instant relief, for it digests what you eat. Howard Gardner.

COLD STEEL OR DEATH.

"There is but one small chance to save your life and that is through an operation," was the awful prospect set before Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., by her doctor after vainly trying to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. He didn't count on the marvellous power of Electric Bitters to cure stomach and liver troubles, but he heard of it, took seven bottles, was wholly cured, avoided surgeon's knife, now weighs more and feels better than ever. It's positively guaranteed to cure stomach, liver and kidney troubles and never disappoints. Price 50¢ at C. E. Holton's drug store.

AN ANCIENT BELIEF.

The ancients believed that rheumatism was the work of a demon within a man. Any one who has had an attack of sciatic or inflammatory rheumatism will agree that the affliction is demoniac enough to warrant the belief. It has never been claimed that Chamberlain's Pain Balm would cast out demons, but it will cure rheumatism, and hundreds bear testimony to the truth of this statement. One application relieves the pain, and this quick relief which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. For sale by C. E. Holton, Druggist.

This season there is a large death rate among children from croup and lung troubles. Prompt action will save the little ones from these terrible diseases. We know of nothing so certain to give instant relief as One Minute Cough Cure. It can also be relied upon in grippe and all throat and lung troubles of adults. Pleasant to take. Howard Gardner.

Dr. McIver's Card.

Dr. Charles D. McIver has issued the following card:

"For the purpose of enabling bright, ambitious, young women, without means, to secure their education at the State Normal and Industrial College it is proposed to raise an endowment fund of $100,000 by one thousand subscriptions of $100 each. None of the subscriptions are to be payable until after January 1st, 1902, and not at all until the full amount of $100,000 shall have been subscribed. The income from this fund will be used to make loans each year to fifty or more young women who could not without borrowing the money attend any college.

"These young women will give personal notes for the loans with the condition that death or failure of health cancels the notes, but that if they are able to secure work after leaving the College they will pay back to the trustees of this fund, without interest, and out of their first earnings the amount borrowed, thus increasing the amount to be lent annually.

"This fund will be placed for investment in the hands of a special committee appointed or approved by the Board of Directors of the State Normal and Industrial College, and only the income is to be used for loans.

"It ought not to be difficult to find one thousand people in North Carolina—an average of about ten to a county—who would gladly contribute $100 to such a philanthropic purpose.

"There are liberal loan funds connected with most of our prominent colleges and universities for men, but institutions for women are not only without endowment, but, as a rule, are also without any considerable loan funds.

"This scheme is not designed to increase the attendance or the revenue of the college. It is a plan which will enable annually fifty or more young women, to whom the door of opportunity now seems closed, to avail themselves of the great advantages offered by the State's college for its women. In this list of fifty or more students over half of the counties of the State can be represented each year. Aid will be given to those who need it, and who, more over, by reason of their character, ambition, and intellectual promise, are worthy to have the proceeds of such a fund invested in their training.

"Are you not willing to subscribe $100 of the $100,000 on the condition that it shall not be payable unless the $100,000 shall be subscribed?

"If you are willing to become a subscriber, please fill out the enclosed blank subscription form and return to me. If you know others who would probably be willing to contribute to such a fund, please send me their names.

Very truly yours,
CHARLES D. McIVER.
